Website Design & Lead Generation

A website design case study for SMT Junk Removal (Send Me That Junk Removal), a local hauling business.

PORTFOLIO

Selected Work

I design and build clean, modern websites for small businesses that need to win customers online. This case study covers the one-page website I designed and built for SMT Junk Removal, focused on a strong brand look and turning visitors into quote requests.

01

SMT Junk Removal Homepage

Hero section & brand identity

Designed a bold, high-contrast homepage that leads with the SMT logo, a clear “You Point. We Haul.” headline, and a Free Quote call to action, so visitors know what the business does within seconds.

Homepage hero with the SMT logo, branded navigation, and orange Free Quote button.

Trust signals

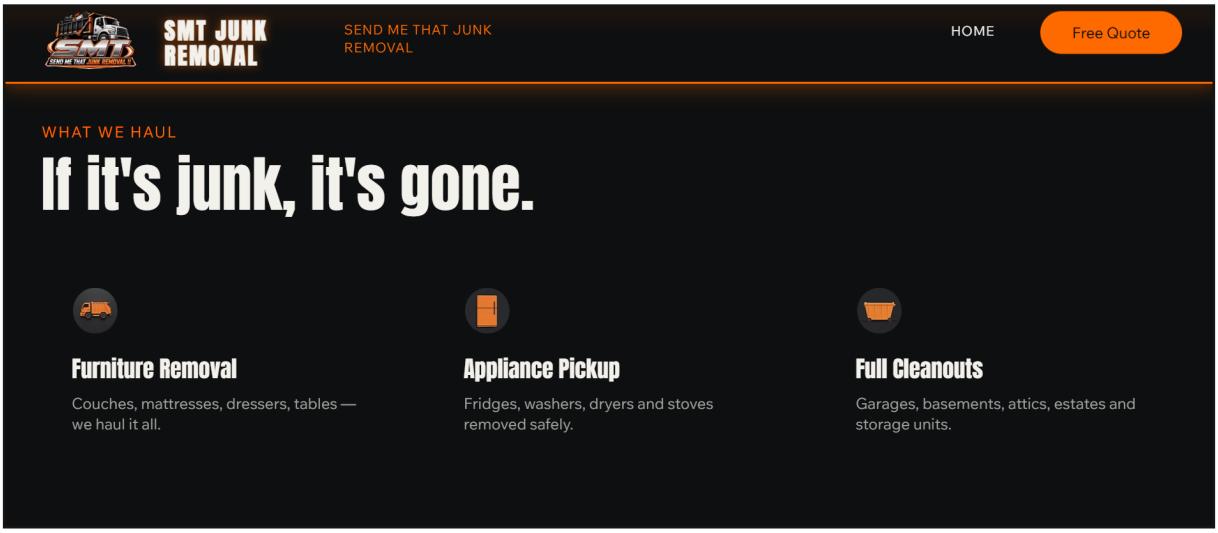

- Same-day pickup and upfront pricing highlighted right under the hero
- Licensed & insured and eco-friendly badges to build trust fast
- Orange-on-black color system carried from the logo across the full site

02

What We Haul

Services section & process

Built a clean services grid so customers can quickly confirm the business handles their job, followed by a simple three-step section that removes uncertainty about how booking works.

“If it’s junk, it’s gone.” services grid with icon cards for each type of job.

Six service cards

- Furniture Removal, Appliance Pickup, and Full Cleanouts
- Construction Debris, Yard Waste, and Commercial Jobs
- Each card pairs a custom orange icon with one short, plain-language line

How It Works
